

NUM

NULL. n. f. Something of no power, or no meaning. Marks in ciphered writing which stand for nothing, and are inserted only to puzzle, are called nulls.

If part of the people be somewhat in the election, you cannot make them nulls or ciphers in the privation or translation. Bacon's War with Spain.

NULLITY. n. f. [from nullus, Latin.] The state of being nowhere.

TO NULLIFY. v. a. [from nullus, Latin.] To annul; to make void.

NULLITY. n. f. [nullité, French.]

1. Want of force or efficacy. It can be no part of my business to overthrow this distinction, and to shew the nullity of it; which has been solidly done by most of our polemic writers. South's Sermons.

The jurisdiction is opened by the party, in default of justice from the ordinary, as by appeals or nullities. Ayliffe.

2. Want of existence. A hard body struck against another hard body, will yield an exterior sound, in so much as if the percussion be over soft, it may induce a nullity of sound; but never an interior sound. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

NUMB. adj. [benumen, benumbed, Saxon.]

1. Torpid; deprived in a great measure of the power of motion and sensation; chill; motionless.

Like a stony statue, cold and numb. Shakespeare. Learning long upon any part maketh it numb and asleep; for that the compression of the part suffereth not the spirits to have free access; and therefore when we come out of it, we feel a stinging or pricking, which is the re-entrance of the spirits. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Producing chilliness; benumbing.

When we both lay in the field, Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me Ev'n in his garments, and did give himself All thin and naked to the numb cold night. Shakespeare.

TO NUMB. v. a. To make torpid; to make dull of motion or sensation; to deaden; to stupefy.

Bedlam beggars, with roaring voices Strike in their numb'd and mortify'd bare arms, Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary; And with this horrible object, from low farms, Inforce their charity. Shakespeare. K. Lear.

She can unlock The clasp'd charm, and thaw the numbing spell. Milton. Plough naked, fawn, and naked sow the land, For lazy winter numbs the lab'ring hand. Dryden.

Nought shall avail The pleasing song, or well repeated tale, When the quick spirits their warm march forbear, And numbing coldness has unbrac'd the ear. Prior.

The fool numbs me like the torpor. Belongs to Swift.
